

FROM THE DESK OF

Jeffrey M. Williams

Just when I was just getting used to the cooler weather and changing leaves of fall, here we are now approaching Thanksgiving, the December holidays and winter. Tempus fugit, indeed.

I will say that one good thing about holidays is that they bring family members together - sometimes from different nearby homes and sometimes from different parts of the country. It feels like only yesterday I was trying to balance attendance at grade school and high school sporting events; now, two of my three kids reside in a completely different time zone. I sure wish we could do regular "Pizza Fridays," but I am grateful that they are happy and doing well where they live now.

So, amidst all the craziness that the holiday season brings - tasks and to do lists, shopping and social commitments, buying and busyness - I am thankful that my holiday season will also see me seeing the people I love so much. I hope that you will be doing the same.

From all of us at Williams Family Law: have a joy-filled holiday season and all the best in 2023.
